Equally, if you get caught using an account generated through these programs, there are big consequences. The official Roblox site strongly advises against using schemes like account generators. They say that anyone asking you to input your details anywhere is scamming you, and that you won't receive a glitched account or free Robux. The terms of service also warn against it, too. They say that you cannot obtain "exploited game or experience content." This includes hacked accounts with Robux. If you're caught doing this, they reserve the right to immediately close your account.

I... don't actually know! I don't think there's any one Roblox object, like a Minecraft block. I guess it could refer to the fact that Roblox lets you build games that you can then explore?

Decentraland is another Metaverse candidate that grapples with this very issue. Dave Carr of the Decentraland Foundation tells me that the founders decided that "rather than have these environments be controlled by central bodies, they should have a decentralised structure and be open to everyone to own and govern." From economic matters, to content moderation and even the maintenance of its servers, Decentraland's user base dictates its entire policy course through regular votes.
